DETAILED ACTION

Election/Restrictions

1. Restriction to one of the following inventions is required under 35 U.S.C. 121:
 - I. Claims 1-15, drawn to a reader of an RFID, classified in class 340, subclass 572.7.
 - II. Claims 16-33, drawn to a low voltage signal stripping circuit, classified in class 335, subclass 7.
 - III. Claims 34-45, drawn to a method for processing a high voltage antenna signal waveform, classified in class 340, subclass 657.
2. Inventions I and II are related as combination and subcombination. Inventions in this relationship are distinct if it can be shown that (1) the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed for patentability, and (2) that the subcombination has utility by itself or in other combinations (MPEP § 806.05(c)). In the instant case, the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed because the RFID reader does not require the particular voltage signal stripping circuit disclosed in invention II. The subcombination has separate utility such as the voltage signal stripping circuit may be used with any other type of RFID reader other than the RFID reader disclosed in invention I.
3. Inventions I and III are related as combination and subcombination. Inventions in this relationship are distinct if it can be shown that (1) the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed for patentability, and (2) that the subcombination has utility by itself or in other combinations (MPEP § 806.05(c)). In the instant case, the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed because the RFID reader does not require the particular method for processing a high voltage antenna signal waveform disclosed in invention III. The subcombination has separate utility such as the method for processing a high voltage antenna signal waveform may be used with any other type of RFID reader other than the RFID reader disclosed in invention I.

3. Inventions II and III are related as combination and subcombination. Inventions in this relationship are distinct if it can be shown that (1) the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed for patentability, and (2) that the subcombination has utility by itself or in other combinations (MPEP § 806.05(c)). In the instant case, the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed because the method for processing a high voltage antenna signal waveform does not require the particular low voltage signal stripping circuit disclosed in invention II. The subcombination has separate utility such as the low voltage signal stripping circuit may be used with any other type voltage processing method other than the voltage processing method disclosed in invention III.
